1. Provide a safe and secure coop. Your coop should be large enough to accommodate your flock, and it should be well-ventilated and protected from predators.
2. Provide plenty of food and water. Chickens need a constant supply of fresh food and water. Make sure their feeders and waterers are always full.
3. Keep your coop clean. A clean coop will help to prevent disease. Clean out the coop regularly, and remove any wet or soiled bedding.
4. Provide a dust bath. Chickens love to take dust baths to keep their feathers clean and free of parasites. Place a shallow dish of sand or dirt in the coop for your chickens to bathe in.
5. Let your chickens out to free range. If possible, let your chickens out to free range every day. This will allow them to get exercise and eat fresh grass and bugs.
6. Collect eggs regularly. Eggs should be collected daily to prevent them from getting dirty or cracked. Store eggs in a cool, dry place.
7. Monitor your chickens for signs of illness. Chickens are susceptible to a variety of diseases, so it's important to monitor them for any signs of illness. If you notice any unusual symptoms, contact your veterinarian immediately.

8. Handle your chickens with care. Chickens are delicate creatures, so it's important to handle them with care. Always support their bodies when you pick them up, and never grab them by their wings or legs.
9. Enjoy your chickens! Raising hens can be a lot of work, but it's also a lot of fun. Enjoy watching your chickens grow and thrive, and savor the fresh eggs they provide.
