Types of Job Visas

There are a number of different job visas available for foreign workers in Japan. The most common type of visa is the Working Visa, which is issued to people who have been offered a job in Japan. Other types of job visas include the Business Manager Visa, the Intra-Company Transfer Visa, and the Highly Skilled Professional Visa. The requirements for each type of visa vary, so it's important to research the specific requirements for the visa that you're interested in.

Requirements for a Job Visa

The general requirements for a Job Visa include:

- A valid passport
- A Certificate of Eligibility (COE), which is issued by the Japanese embassy or consulate in your home country
- A job offer from a Japanese company
- Proof of financial stability
- A medical certificate

The specific requirements for each type of visa may vary, so it's important to check the specific requirements for the visa that you're interested in.

Application Process

The application process for a Job Visa typically takes several months. The first step is to obtain a Certificate of Eligibility (COE) from the Japanese embassy or consulate in your home country. Once you have a COE, you can apply for a Job Visa at the Japanese embassy or consulate in your home country.

The application process for a Job Visa can be complex, so it's important to seek professional advice from an immigration lawyer or a Japanese embassy or consulate.
