Levels of Playerism

There are three main levels of playerism:

1. The Social Player

The social player is the most subtle and least harmful type of player. They are good at reading people and figuring out what they want. They use this information to build relationships and gain trust. Once they have gained your trust, they will start to exploit you for their own personal gain.

Social players are often charming and charismatic. They are good listeners and they know how to make you feel special. However, they are also very selfish and manipulative. They will say whatever they need to say to get what they want, and they will never hesitate to break your heart if it means getting ahead.

2. The Emotional Player

The emotional player is more overt than the social player. They use emotional manipulation to control and exploit others. They may guilt you into doing things you don't want to do, or they may make you feel like you owe them something.

Emotional players are often very needy and insecure. They crave attention and validation, and they will do whatever it takes to get it. They may even resort to emotional blackmail or threats to keep you in line.

3. The Physical Player

The physical player is the most dangerous type of player. They use physical violence or the threat of violence to control and exploit others. They may beat you, rape you, or even kill you.

Physical players are often very angry and violent. They have little regard for human life, and they will not hesitate to use violence to get what they want.

How to Recognize a Player

There are a few key signs that someone may be a player:

- They are very charming and charismatic.
- They are good listeners and they know how to make you feel special.
- They are very selfish and manipulative.
- They will say whatever they need to say to get what they want.
- They will never hesitate to break your heart if it means getting ahead.
- They are very needy and insecure.
- They crave attention and validation.
- They may even resort to emotional blackmail or threats to keep you in line.
- They are very angry and violent.
- They have little regard for human life.
- They will not hesitate to use violence to get what they want.

If you recognize any of these signs in someone you are dating, it is important to get out of the relationship as quickly as possible. Players can be very dangerous, and they will not hesitate to hurt you if you get in their way.

How to Protect Yourself from Players

There are a few things you can do to protect yourself from being manipulated by players:

- Trust your gut. If something feels off about someone, it probably is.
- Don't be afraid to say no. You have the right to say no to anything you don't want to do.
- Set boundaries. Let people know what you are and are not willing to tolerate.
- Be aware of the signs of manipulation. If someone is trying to manipulate you, they may use guilt, shame, or fear to get you to do what they want.
- Get help if you need it. If you are in a relationship with a player, it is important to get help from a therapist or counselor.

Playerism is a serious problem that can have a devastating impact on your life. If you are being manipulated by a player, it is important to get help as soon as possible.

Mackology

Mackology is a term used to describe the study and practice of playerism. Mackologists believe that playerism is a natural and inevitable part of human nature. They argue that players are simply more evolved than non-players, and that they have a natural right to dominate and exploit others.

Mackology is a dangerous and harmful ideology. It promotes the idea that it is acceptable to manipulate and exploit others for personal gain. It also reinforces the idea that women are inferior to men, and that they are meant to be subservient to men.

If you are interested in learning more about playerism, I encourage you to read the following books:

- The Game by Neil Strauss
- The Rules of the Game by Allen Pease and Barbara Pease
- The 50th Law by Robert Greene

These books will give you a better understanding of the different levels of playerism and how to recognize and avoid players.
