In her debut novel, The New Burning Times, Susanna Clarke has crafted a powerful and haunting tale of the Salem witch trials. The novel tells the story of Mary Goode, a young woman who is accused of witchcraft and must fight for her life.

Mary is a complex and sympathetic character. She is a strong and independent woman, but she is also vulnerable and alone. When she is accused of witchcraft, she is quickly condemned by the community. She is tortured and imprisoned, and she comes close to being executed.

But Mary is not willing to give up. She fights for her life, and she eventually wins her freedom. The New Burning Times is a story of hope and resilience. It is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope.

Clarke's writing is beautiful and evocative. She brings the Salem witch trials to life in all their horror and brutality. But she also shows us the courage and resilience of the people who lived through them.

The New Burning Times is a must-read for anyone interested in history, witchcraft, or women's rights. It is a powerful and moving novel that will stay with you long after you finish it.

The Historical Context of the Salem Witch Trials

The Salem witch trials were a dark chapter in American history. In 1692, over 200 people were accused of witchcraft in Salem, Massachusetts. Nineteen people were hanged, and one person was pressed to death.

The trials were sparked by a group of young women who began exhibiting strange behavior. They complained of being pinched, pricked, and bitten by invisible creatures. They also spoke in tongues and made strange noises.

The community quickly became convinced that the girls were possessed by the devil. And soon, accusations of witchcraft began to fly.

The trials were a miscarriage of justice. Many of the accused were innocent, and they were convicted based on flimsy evidence.

The New Burning Times is a powerful reminder of the dangers of mass hysteria and prejudice. It is a story that is still relevant today.

The Characters in The New Burning Times

Mary Goode is the protagonist of The New Burning Times. She is a young woman who is accused of witchcraft and must fight for her life.

Mary is a complex and sympathetic character. She is a strong and independent woman, but she is also vulnerable and alone. When she is accused of witchcraft, she is quickly condemned by the community. She is tortured and imprisoned, and she comes close to being executed.

But Mary is not willing to give up. She fights for her life, and she eventually wins her freedom. The New Burning Times is a story of hope and resilience. It is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope.

In addition to Mary, The New Burning Times features a cast of other well-developed characters. These characters include:

- John Goode: Mary's husband, who is also accused of witchcraft.
- Reverend Samuel Parris: The minister of the Salem church, who is one of the main instigators of the witch trials.
- Ann Putnam: One of the young women who accuses Mary of witchcraft.
- Giles Corey: A farmer who is accused of witchcraft and is pressed to death.

Clarke's characters are all believable and well-rounded. They are people who are caught up in a whirlwind of events that they cannot control.
